

Hate Being Unprepared?

Push Analytics Could Be the Solution
You've Been Searching For.

Learn how Mary was able to explain YTD performance and a monthly variance to her VP in two minutes—all with zero meeting preparation time.

Have you ever walked into a meeting where an attendee ran a report – and their numbers are different from yours?

You begin to panic a little, thinking, what did I do wrong?

The next 15 minutes are wasted comparing criteria and trying to understand how each person ran their version of the report.

Ultimately, the underlying issue is usually that someone filtered the data incorrectly or ran the report wrong.

Corrective action is delayed because you did not have a common source of truth for variances, and your organization loses more time and money.

Push Analytics is the Answer

The solution to this—and several costly related problems—is to push real-time analytics to occasional users of these tools via email. This avoids problems like:

- Unproductive meetings because a report was run wrong
- Decision-makers who do not review their reports and/or analytics because accessing them is too cumbersome
- Non-financial leaders performing their own analyses with mixed success

How It Works

Imagine your organization just closed another pay period or fiscal month. With push analytics, customized executive summaries and departmental analytics are prepared for each decision-maker and distributed as visual html emails.

This is a reality for Sixth Sense Intelligence customers, and they love sharing their stories...

The Right Answers In 2 Minutes

Mary was in a meeting with her vice president.

When the VP asked about a variance in her financials, Mary pulled out her phone and located the same analyses he had reviewed.

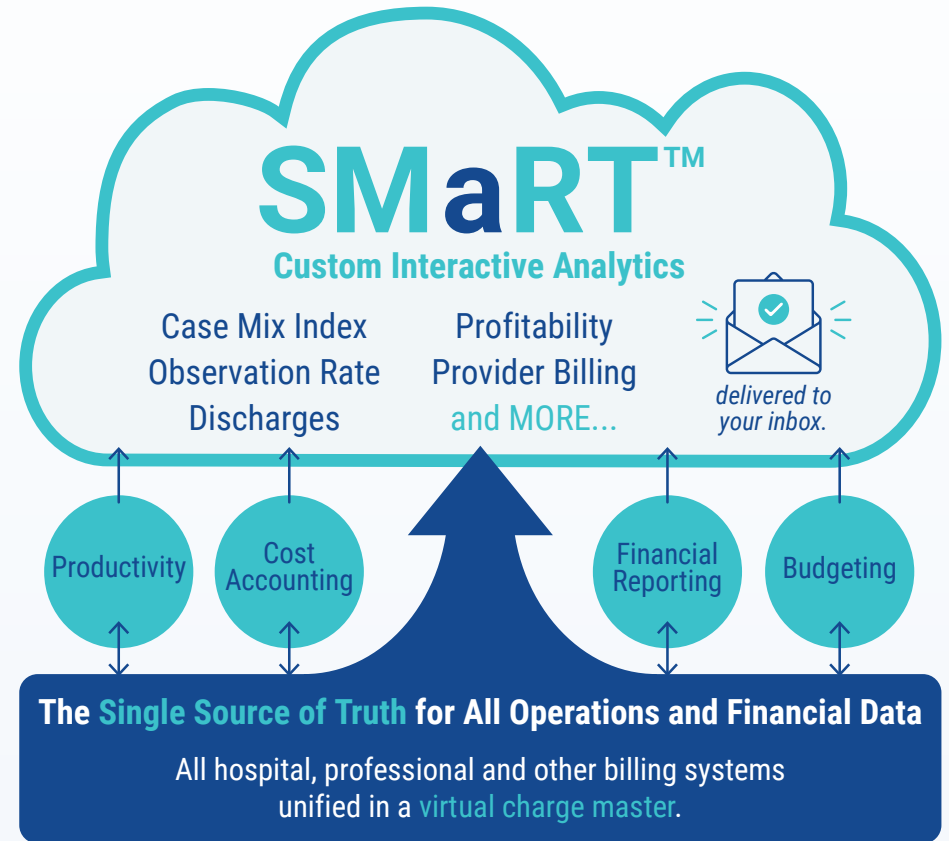

She scrolled through her detailed departmental analyses and explained her monthly variance as well as YTD performance.

The discussion lasted only two minutes, and Mary's vice president was satisfied.

Since push analytics delivered a single source of truth, Mary was able to spend zero time preparing for the meeting, in addition to responding immediately and confidently.
